

Writer Sense Communications

proofreading | editing | book formatting

move comma

April 27 2009

Company name
Company address line 1
Company address line 2

Increase your competitive edge.*

Dear So and So.

On Twitter, today's fastest growing social networking site, you have only 140 characters to to say your piece. There is a small window of opportunity to get your message across. Typos are expected, glossed over, and in some cases made intentionally for.

Yet, in today's marketplace producing clearly written documents is more important than ever. If the linguistic quality of a report, advertisement or article is superior to that of its competitors, the credibility of the company is enhanced. their competitive edge will be greater, their impact more memorable and prospects of securing future work will be increase.

Hiring a proofreader will fastforward a company's sales and marketing by keeping it clear, concise, consistent and correct.

Nonetheless, a proofreader will agree there five things they cant change.

1. spellchecker miss errors
2. we all makes mistakes
3. finding errors excites them
4. 5 what you see is not always what you get.
6. we all make mistakes.

What can a proofreader change? You decide...

Your are sincerely,

Davina Haisell, Proofreader
Writer Sense Communications

PS Let me help you avoid the embarrassment. Contact me today!

PPS Read about my proofreading experience and check out my testimonials.

*You won't increase your competitive edge with a letter like this, but I hope to.

Writer Sense Communications

www.writersense.ca | davina.haisell@gmail.com | 604-732-0902 | <http://twitter.com/DavinaH>